PREAMBLE

Termez State University (hereinafter — "the University") is a state institution of higher education operating in the Surkhandarya region of the Republic of Uzbekistan, whose mission is to deliver high-quality education, to advance scholarship and scientific research, and to serve the social, cultural and economic development of the region and the country. The University recognizes that the trust placed in it by students, staff, families, employers and the State rests on the integrity, fairness and professionalism of everyone who works, teaches, studies or represents the University in any capacity.

This Code of Ethics and Internal Personnel Regulations (hereinafter — "the Code") consolidates, in a single instrument, the ethical principles that guide the conduct of the University community and the internal rules that govern recruitment, employment, remuneration, discipline, and the termination of employment relationships within the University. The Code is issued pursuant to the Constitution and laws of the Republic of Uzbekistan, the Charter of the University, and resolutions of its Academic Council, and is binding on all administrators, academic staff, researchers, administrative and support personnel, and, to the extent specified herein, students, applicants, contractors and visitors acting on the University's premises or on its behalf.

The provisions of this Code do not replace but complement the employment contract of each employee, the Labor Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan, and other legal acts in force. In the event of any conflict between this Code and mandatory provisions of national legislation, the legislation of the Republic of Uzbekistan shall prevail.

The University further recognizes that this Code operates alongside its Charter, Academic Council resolutions, and department-level instructions, and is designed to be read as a coherent whole rather than as a set of isolated rules. Every provision of the Code should be understood in light of its stated purpose: to protect people, to ensure fairness, and to support the University's educational and scientific mission.

PART ONE — CODE OF ETHICS

Article 1. General Provisions

1.1. This Code establishes the fundamental ethical standards, values and rules of conduct expected of every member of the University community, and sets out the internal personnel regulations that apply to all forms of employment at the University, whether on a permanent, fixed-term, part-time or contractual basis.

1.2. The purpose of the Code is to: (a) protect the dignity, safety and rights of every person associated with the University; (b) promote a culture of honesty, transparency and accountability; (c) provide clear and fair rules for recruitment, employment, evaluation, discipline and termination; and (d) safeguard the reputation and academic integrity of the University.

1.3. The Code applies within the University's campuses, branches, affiliated research centers and administrative units, as well as to conduct carried out off-site — including during business travel, conferences, fieldwork, online teaching, and official social media activity — where such conduct is connected with the person's role at the University or may reasonably affect the University's interests or reputation.

1.4. Every member of the University community is individually responsible for knowing and complying with this Code. Ignorance of its provisions does not excuse non-compliance. Heads of structural units, deans, and heads of departments bear additional responsibility for promoting awareness of the Code among the staff and students under their supervision.

1.5. The Rectorate shall ensure that this Code is made available to all employees at the time of hiring, published on the University's official website and intranet, and reviewed periodically to remain consistent with legislation and best institutional practice.

1.6. This Code shall be interpreted and applied in good faith, having regard to its stated purpose and values, and any ambiguity in its provisions shall be resolved by the Ethics Committee in consultation with the Human Resources Department and, where necessary, the Rectorate.

Article 2. Definitions and Interpretation

2.1. For the purposes of this Code, "University" means Termez State University, including its faculties, institutes, branches, centers, and all administrative and academic subdivisions.

2.2. "Employee" means any person engaged by the University under an employment contract, including academic, administrative, research, technical, and support staff, regardless of the duration or nature of the contract.

2.3. "Member of the University community" means any employee, student, doctoral candidate, visiting researcher, or contractor performing work or study activities on the University's premises or under its authority.

2.4. "Head of unit" means a dean, head of department, director of an institute or center, or any other official exercising supervisory authority over a structural subdivision of the University.

2.5. Terms such as "conflict of interest," "harassment," and "discrimination" have the meaning given to them in the Article in which they are defined; a term not separately defined shall be interpreted according to its ordinary meaning and the legislation of the Republic of Uzbekistan.

2.6. Headings of Parts and Articles are used for convenience of reference only and do not affect the interpretation of the provisions to which they relate. References to "this Code" include both Part One and Part Two unless the context indicates otherwise.

Article 3. Legal and Regulatory Basis

3.1. This Code is developed in accordance with the Constitution of the Republic of Uzbekistan, the Labor Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan, the Law of the Republic of Uzbekistan "On Education", the Law "On Higher and Postgraduate Education", the Law "On Combating Corruption", the Law "On Guarantees of Equal Rights and Opportunities for Women and Men" (No. LRU-562 of 2 September 2019), the Law "On Personal Data", and other legislative and normative acts of the Republic of Uzbekistan.

3.2. The Code further implements the Charter of Termez State University and gives practical effect to decisions of the Academic Council concerning academic integrity, professional conduct, and personnel management.

3.3. Where the University enters into international cooperation agreements, exchange programs, or joint research projects, the ethical standards of this Code apply in addition to, and without prejudice to, any ethical requirements of the partner institution or funding body, provided these do not contradict the legislation of the Republic of Uzbekistan.

3.4. Internal instructions, job descriptions, departmental rules and collective agreements adopted by the University must conform to this Code. Any internal act found to be inconsistent with the Code shall be revised by the issuing unit within a reasonable period following notice from the Ethics Committee or the Human Resources Department.

3.5. Translations of this Code into languages other than the language of its original adoption are provided for convenience; in the event of any discrepancy between versions, the version approved by the Academic Council in the official working language of the University shall prevail.

Article 4. Mission, Vision and Core Values

4.1. The University's mission is to cultivate knowledge, critical thinking, and professional competence among its students while contributing to scientific progress and the sustainable development of society. All members of the community are expected to act in ways that advance, rather than undermine, this mission.

4.2. The University upholds the following core values: academic excellence and intellectual honesty; respect for human dignity and diversity; fairness and equal opportunity; transparency and accountability in governance and administration; social responsibility toward students, staff and the wider community; and continuous improvement through evidence-based practice.

4.3. Respect is understood as the recognition of the inherent worth of every person regardless of position, background, gender, ethnicity, language, religion, disability, or social status, and is to be demonstrated in everyday interactions, official communications, and decision-making processes.

4.4. Integrity requires that staff and students act consistently with these values even when no one is observing, that they avoid conduct that would embarrass the University if disclosed publicly, and that they raise concerns through proper channels rather than remain silent or act unilaterally.

4.5. These values are not aspirational statements alone; they inform the specific rules set out in the remaining articles of this Code and are to be considered by the Ethics Committee, disciplinary bodies and management when interpreting ambiguous situations not expressly covered by a specific provision.

4.6. The University periodically communicates these values through orientation programs, staff meetings, and institutional publications, and encourages open discussion of ethical dilemmas encountered in academic and administrative practice as a means of embedding the Code's principles in everyday decision-making.

Article 5. Academic and Professional Integrity

5.1. Academic staff, researchers and administrators shall conduct their teaching, research, assessment and administrative duties with honesty, rigor and respect for established scholarly and professional standards.

5.2. Plagiarism, fabrication or falsification of data, unauthorized collaboration, ghost-authorship, and the misrepresentation of academic credentials or research results are strictly prohibited and constitute serious violations of this Code, regardless of whether such conduct is discovered before or after publication, graduation, or promotion.

5.3. Staff involved in student assessment must apply grading criteria consistently, objectively and without discrimination or favoritism, must maintain the confidentiality of examination materials, and must promptly disclose to their head of department any circumstance that could compromise the fairness of an assessment, including a personal relationship with a student being assessed.

5.4. Employees engaged in externally funded research or consultancy must disclose the source and terms of such funding to the University where required by internal procedure, and must ensure that external activity does not compromise their objectivity, their primary duties to the University, or the interests of students.

5.5. The University encourages open scholarly debate and the free exchange of ideas, and no employee shall be penalized for raising, in good faith, a scientifically or professionally grounded objection to established views, provided that such debate is conducted with respect for colleagues and adherence to accepted standards of academic discourse.

Article 6. Equal Opportunities and Gender Equality

6.1. Termez State University is committed to fostering an inclusive environment that guarantees equal opportunities for all members of the academic community, regardless of gender, background, or physical ability. This commitment is governed by both national legislation — in particular the Law "On Guarantees of Equal Rights and Opportunities for Women and Men" — and the University's own internal institutional policies, which are systematically implemented through the measures described in this Article.

6.2. Policy Framework. The University's commitment to equality is formally integrated into this Code of Ethics and the internal personnel regulations set out in Part Two. These documents explicitly prohibit any form of discrimination on the basis of sex, gender, marital or family status, age, ethnicity, language, religion, social origin, beliefs, or disability, and establish clear pathways for reporting and addressing grievances related to such discrimination.

6.3. Inclusive Recruitment and Career Development. The University implements gender-neutral recruitment practices at every stage — from vacancy announcements and shortlisting criteria to interview panels and final selection decisions — and promotes professional development opportunities for all staff without regard to gender. Human Resources management processes, including access to training, mentorship, promotion and leadership roles, are designed and periodically reviewed to ensure fair and equal access for all employees.

6.4. Student Support and Accessibility. To ensure equal access to education, the University provides tailored support for students from diverse backgrounds. This includes accessible learning infrastructure and reasonable accommodation for students with disabilities, social scholarship programs for students from low-income families, and designated support units for students with special needs or those requiring socio-economic assistance.

6.5. Monitoring and Implementation. Responsibility for overseeing equality-related measures lies with dedicated structural units, including the Women's Advisory Board and the student affairs offices, working in coordination with the Human Resources Department and the Ethics Committee. The University regularly monitors the representation and engagement of different groups among staff, faculty and students through participation data and survey feedback.

6.6. Reporting Integration. Findings from this monitoring are integrated into the University's annual institutional reports and presented to the Rectorate and Academic Council, together with recommendations for corrective action where representation gaps, pay disparities, or barriers to advancement are identified.

6.7. Pregnancy, Maternity and Family Responsibilities. No employee shall be disadvantaged in recruitment, remuneration, evaluation, or promotion on account of pregnancy, maternity or paternity leave, or other family responsibilities recognized under the Labor Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan. Managers must ensure that temporary absence for these reasons does not adversely affect an employee's subsequent performance rating or career progression.

6.8. By embedding these values into its governance structure, the University ensures that equality is not merely a statement of intent but an actionable component of institutional strategy, contributing to a fair, safe and diverse academic and working environment for every member of the community.

Article 7. Non-Discrimination and Prevention of Harassment

7.1. The University prohibits discrimination, bullying, and harassment — including sexual harassment — in any form, whether committed by a supervisor against a subordinate, between colleagues of equal rank, or by a student against staff or another student.

7.2. Harassment includes any unwelcome verbal, physical, or visual conduct that creates an intimidating, hostile, humiliating or offensive environment, or that unreasonably interferes with a person's work or study performance, including repeated unwanted comments about a person's appearance, persistent unwelcome romantic or sexual advances, and the display or circulation of degrading images or materials.

7.3. Any employee who believes they have experienced or witnessed discrimination or harassment may report the matter confidentially to their immediate supervisor, the Human Resources Department, the Women's Advisory Board, or directly to the Ethics Committee, and may choose to bypass any of these channels where the report concerns that channel's own personnel.

7.4. The University guarantees that a report made in good faith will not result in retaliation against the person who made it. Retaliation against a complainant or a witness is itself a serious disciplinary offense and will be treated at least as gravely as the conduct originally reported.

7.5. All complaints of harassment or discrimination shall be investigated promptly, impartially, and with due regard for the privacy of all parties involved, following the procedure set out in Articles 19 and 20 of this Code.

7.6. Where an investigation substantiates a complaint, the University shall apply proportionate disciplinary measures under Article 32, up to and including termination of employment or expulsion, and shall take reasonable steps to prevent recurrence, including additional training and, where necessary, changes to reporting lines or working arrangements.

Article 8. Conflict of Interest

8.1. A conflict of interest arises whenever an employee's personal, financial, family, or other private interest could improperly influence, or appear to influence, the impartial performance of their University duties.

8.2. Employees must disclose, in writing, to their head of department and the Human Resources Department any situation involving: participation in decisions concerning the hiring, supervision, evaluation, or promotion of a close relative or person with whom they have a personal relationship; ownership or management interests in an entity that does business with the University; or outside employment or consultancy that may compete with the University's interests.

8.3. An employee who has disclosed a conflict of interest must, upon instruction from their supervisor or the Ethics Committee, recuse themselves from the decision or process concerned, and the matter shall instead be handled by another appropriately authorized person.

8.4. Members of admissions committees, examination boards, procurement commissions, and hiring panels bear a heightened duty to disclose conflicts, given the direct impact of their decisions on individual students, applicants and employees.

8.5. Failure to disclose a known conflict of interest, or continued participation in a decision after a conflict has been identified, constitutes a violation of this Code independent of whether the underlying decision was, in substance, fair.

8.6. A register of disclosed conflicts of interest shall be maintained confidentially by the Human Resources Department, reviewed periodically by the Ethics Committee, and consulted, as necessary, when composing committees, panels, or commissions, to avoid assigning conflicted individuals to related matters.

Article 9. Anti-Corruption, Gifts and Hospitality

9.1. The University maintains a zero-tolerance policy toward corruption, bribery, extortion, and the abuse of official position for personal gain, in full accordance with the Law of the Republic of Uzbekistan "On Combating Corruption".

9.2. Employees shall not solicit, accept, offer, or give any payment, gift, service, or other benefit intended to influence, or that could reasonably be perceived to influence, an official decision relating to admissions, grading, hiring, procurement, contracting, or any other University function.

9.3. Modest gifts of token value received in the ordinary course of professional courtesy — such as souvenirs exchanged during official visits or conference materials — may be accepted on behalf of the University and, where appropriate, registered with the relevant department, but must never be requested, and must never come from a person seeking or holding a benefit dependent on the recipient's decision.

9.4. Any employee who is offered a bribe, an improper gift, or any other inducement must refuse it and report the incident immediately to their supervisor and to the Ethics Committee, documenting the date, circumstances, and identity of the person involved to the extent known.

9.5. Employees involved in procurement, tendering, or the disbursement of University funds must comply strictly with applicable procurement rules, maintain complete and accurate documentation, and disclose any personal or family connection with a bidder or supplier before participating in the relevant decision.

9.6. Violations of this Article shall be reported, where required by law, to the competent state authorities, without prejudice to internal disciplinary proceedings under Article 32.

9.7. The Human Resources Department shall include a review of anti-corruption obligations in the induction of every new employee, and heads of units handling procurement, admissions, or the disbursement of funds shall complete additional anti-corruption training on a periodic basis.

Article 10. Confidentiality and Information Security

10.1. Employees shall protect the confidentiality of information obtained in the course of their duties, including student records, personnel files, examination materials, unpublished research, financial data, and strategic institutional plans, and shall not disclose such information to unauthorized persons.

10.2. Confidentiality obligations continue after the termination of employment with respect to information that remains sensitive, proprietary, or protected by law, including personal data governed by the Law "On Personal Data".

10.3. Access to confidential systems and records shall be granted strictly on a need-to-know basis. Employees must not share passwords or access credentials, must log out of shared systems after use, and must promptly report any suspected data breach to the Information Technology Department and the Human Resources Department.

10.4. Research data, unpublished manuscripts, and student work submitted for evaluation are confidential and may not be used, copied, or disclosed by staff for personal advantage or shared with third parties without proper authorization and, where applicable, the consent of the author.

10.5. Exceptions to confidentiality apply where disclosure is required by law, ordered by a competent court or authority, or necessary to prevent an imminent risk to health, safety, or the rights of others, in which case the disclosure shall be limited to what is strictly necessary and reported to the Rectorate.

10.6. Employees who work with third-party contractors, auditors, or accreditation bodies must ensure that any confidential information shared with such parties is covered by an appropriate confidentiality undertaking, and must limit disclosure to what is necessary for the purpose of the engagement.

Article 11. Use of University Property and Digital Resources

11.1. University property — including buildings, laboratories, equipment, vehicles, library materials, and consumable supplies — must be used solely for legitimate academic, research, administrative, or other University-sanctioned purposes, and must be maintained with reasonable care.

11.2. Limited incidental personal use of office equipment, email, and internet access is tolerated provided it does not interfere with the employee's duties, does not incur material cost to the University, and does not involve unlawful, offensive, or reputationally damaging content.

11.3. Employees must not use University systems, letterhead, seals, or the University's name or logo for private commercial purposes, political campaigning, or any activity not authorized by the Rectorate.

11.4. Software, licensed databases, and digital platforms provided by the University must be used in compliance with applicable licensing terms; unauthorized copying, distribution, or circumvention of security controls is prohibited.

11.5. Any loss, theft, or damage to University property must be reported promptly to the relevant administrative unit, and an employee found to have caused loss or damage through gross negligence, misuse, or misconduct may be held financially and disciplinarily liable in accordance with the Labor Code and this Code.

11.6. Employees who telework or use University-issued laptops, mobile devices, or storage media away from the campus remain fully responsible for the security and appropriate use of University property and data outside the workplace, and must return all such property promptly upon request or upon termination of employment.

Article 12. Responsible Use of Artificial Intelligence and Digital Learning Tools

12.1. The University recognizes the growing role of artificial intelligence, learning management systems, and other digital tools in teaching, research, and administration, and encourages their responsible and transparent use in support of the University's mission.

12.2. Staff and students who use artificial intelligence tools in teaching, coursework, assessment, or research must do so transparently, disclosing such use where required by course policy, publication standards, or funding body requirements, and must not present AI-generated content as their own original work where this would constitute academic dishonesty prohibited under Article 5.

12.3. Instructors who permit or restrict the use of artificial intelligence tools in a particular course or assessment must communicate the applicable rules clearly to students in advance and apply them consistently and fairly across all students in the course.

12.4. Employees must not input confidential student data, unpublished research findings, or other protected information described in Article 10 into external artificial intelligence or cloud-based tools that are not approved by the University's Information Technology Department, in order to prevent unauthorized disclosure or retention of such data by third-party providers.

12.5. Decisions that materially affect a student's or employee's rights, such as final grades, disciplinary sanctions, or hiring outcomes, shall not be made solely on the basis of an automated or algorithmic tool without meaningful human review and accountability.

12.6. The Information Technology Department, in consultation with the Academic Council, shall issue and periodically update practical guidance on the approved use of digital learning platforms and artificial intelligence tools, to be read together with this Article.

Article 13. Conduct Toward Students

13.1. Staff shall treat all students with respect, patience, and fairness, and shall provide guidance and evaluation based solely on academic merit and professional criteria.

13.2. Romantic or sexual relationships between staff and students over whom the staff member exercises any form of academic authority — including teaching, grading, supervision, or advising — are strongly discouraged and, where such authority exists concurrently with the relationship, must be disclosed to the head of department so that alternative supervisory or grading arrangements can be made.

13.3. Staff must not require or solicit personal services, favors, or payments from students in exchange for grades, recommendations, or any other academic benefit; any such conduct is treated as a severe violation of this Code and may constitute a criminal offense under applicable law.

13.4. Staff responsible for student welfare, including advisors, resident assistants, and student affairs officers, must handle sensitive student information — including health, financial hardship, and disciplinary matters — with discretion and refer students to appropriate support services when needed.

13.5. Students with grievances against a staff member may raise them through the Dean's office, the Student Affairs Office, or directly to the Ethics Committee, and shall be protected from any form of retaliation for doing so in good faith.

13.6. The University commits to providing accessible complaint channels for students with disabilities and for students who may face language or cultural barriers in expressing a concern, including through designated support units referenced in Article 6.

13.7. Staff supervising theses, dissertations, or research projects must give due academic credit to student contributions in any resulting publication or presentation, and must not present a student's original work or ideas as their own.

Article 14. Conduct Among Colleagues

14.1. Employees shall interact with colleagues, supervisors, and subordinates with courtesy, professionalism, and respect for differing opinions, working styles, and backgrounds.

14.2. Supervisors must exercise their authority fairly, avoid favoritism or nepotism in the allocation of tasks, resources, teaching loads, or opportunities, and provide constructive, timely feedback on performance.

14.3. Disagreements about work matters should be addressed directly and professionally with the person concerned, or escalated through the appropriate management chain, rather than through gossip, public criticism, or exclusion of a colleague from legitimate professional activities.

14.4. Bullying, including persistent unjustified criticism, humiliation in front of others, deliberate exclusion, or the assignment of demeaning tasks intended to undermine a colleague, is prohibited regardless of the relative seniority of the persons involved.

14.5. Employees are encouraged to support the professional development of junior colleagues through mentorship, fair delegation of responsibilities, and recognition of their contributions in publications, reports, and public communications.

14.6. Heads of unit shall ensure that meetings, teaching assignments, and departmental social events are organized inclusively, without the effective exclusion of colleagues on the basis of gender, seniority, or any characteristic protected under Article 6.

Article 15. Conduct Toward External Partners and the Public

15.1. Employees representing the University in dealings with government bodies, partner institutions, donors, employers, or the general public must act honestly, professionally, and in a manner that reflects positively on the University's reputation.

15.2. Statements made on behalf of the University to external parties must be accurate and must not exceed the employee's actual authority; employees who are uncertain of their authority to speak on a matter should refer the inquiry to the appropriate office.

15.3. In dealings with contractors, suppliers, and business partners, employees must apply consistent, non-discriminatory criteria, avoid conflicts of interest as described in Article 8, and ensure that contractual obligations are honored in good faith.

15.4. Employees engaging with the local community, including through outreach and social responsibility programs, should do so in ways consistent with the University's values of respect, inclusion, and service, and should avoid actions that could be perceived as exploiting the University's name for personal or third-party benefit.

15.5. Employees negotiating agreements, memoranda of understanding, or cooperation frameworks with external partners must ensure that such instruments are reviewed by the appropriate legal or administrative unit prior to signature, and must not commit the University to obligations exceeding their delegated authority.

15.6. Where an external partner's conduct or request would require the University to act inconsistently with this Code, the employee concerned shall decline the request and refer the matter to their head of unit or the Ethics Committee for guidance.

Article 16. Media and Social Media Conduct

16.1. Official communications with the press and public media on behalf of the University shall be made only by authorized spokespersons designated by the Rectorate, unless an employee has been specifically delegated this authority for a particular matter.

16.2. Employees who use personal social media accounts must not present personal opinions as the official position of the University, must avoid disclosing confidential information described in Article 10, and must not post content that is discriminatory, harassing, or otherwise inconsistent with the values in Article 4.

16.3. Employees are free to engage in scholarly debate, civic discussion, and personal expression online in their individual capacity, provided such expression does not violate this Code, applicable law, or the legitimate interests of the University, its staff, or its students.

16.4. Photographs, videos, or personal information concerning students or colleagues shall not be published on social media without appropriate consent, particularly where such material could cause embarrassment, reveal confidential circumstances, or compromise safety.

16.5. Any employee who becomes aware that the University's reputation is being materially misrepresented online should notify the University's communications office rather than engage in public dispute in a personal capacity.

16.6. Departmental and institutional social media accounts operated on behalf of the University shall be managed by designated administrators, who shall moderate public comments in line with the University's values and remove content that is abusive, discriminatory, or otherwise inconsistent with this Code.

Article 17. Environmental Responsibility and Sustainability

17.1. The University is committed to conducting its academic, research, and administrative activities in an environmentally responsible manner, consistent with national environmental legislation and its role as a public institution serving the Surkhandarya region.

17.2. Employees and students are encouraged to use energy, water, paper, and other resources economically, to participate in recycling and waste-reduction initiatives organized by the University, and to report wasteful or environmentally harmful practices to the relevant administrative unit.

17.3. Staff responsible for laboratories, workshops, and facilities involving hazardous materials must comply with applicable environmental and safety regulations concerning the storage, use, and disposal of such materials, in coordination with the occupational health and safety measures described in Article 30.

17.4. The University shall, where feasible, take environmental impact into account in decisions concerning campus construction, procurement, and major institutional projects, and shall encourage research and teaching that contributes to environmental awareness and sustainable development in the region.

17.5. Structural units organizing conferences, fieldwork, or off-site events on behalf of the University are encouraged to adopt reasonable measures to minimize the environmental footprint of such activities.

Article 18. International Cooperation and Academic Mobility

18.1. The University promotes international academic cooperation, including student and staff exchange, joint research, and partnerships with foreign universities, as a means of advancing its educational and scientific mission.

18.2. Employees and students participating in international mobility programs, conferences, or joint projects on behalf of the University must comply with this Code and the legislation of the Republic of Uzbekistan while acting in that capacity, in addition to any specific rules of the host institution or program.

18.3. Agreements with foreign partner institutions must be reviewed and approved through the University's established procedures to ensure consistency with national legislation, protection of intellectual property, and the ethical standards set out in this Code, including data protection under Article 10.

18.4. Employees representing the University abroad must safeguard the University's reputation, avoid conduct that could compromise ongoing or future international partnerships, and report to the Rectorate any significant issue arising during an international assignment that may affect the University's interests.

18.5. The University shall ensure that opportunities for international mobility, scholarships, and exchange programs are announced and allocated transparently and without discrimination, in accordance with the principles of equal opportunity set out in Article 6.

Article 19. Ethics Committee

19.1. The University shall maintain a standing Ethics Committee responsible for promoting awareness of this Code, advising the Rectorate on ethical matters, and receiving, reviewing, and where necessary investigating reports of alleged violations.

19.2. The Ethics Committee shall be composed of representatives of the academic staff, administrative staff, the Human Resources Department, the Women's Advisory Board, the trade union committee, and student representatives, appointed for a defined term by order of the Rector on the recommendation of the Academic Council, ensuring balanced gender representation in its composition.

19.3. Members of the Ethics Committee must act independently and impartially, must recuse themselves from any matter in which they have a personal interest or relationship with a party involved, and are bound by the confidentiality obligations set out in Article 10.

19.4. The Ethics Committee shall establish and publish clear procedures for submitting complaints, conducting preliminary assessments, and referring substantiated matters to the appropriate disciplinary body, ensuring that both complainants and respondents are treated fairly and given the opportunity to be heard.

19.5. The Committee shall submit periodic reports to the Rectorate and Academic Council summarizing, in anonymized and aggregated form, the number and nature of complaints received and their outcomes, together with recommendations for improving institutional practice.

19.6. Decisions of the Ethics Committee regarding the substantiation of a complaint are advisory to the Rector or the relevant disciplinary authority, who retains ultimate responsibility for imposing any disciplinary sanction in accordance with Article 32 and the Labor Code.

19.7. The University shall provide the Ethics Committee with adequate administrative support and access to relevant information necessary to perform its functions, and shall ensure that no structural unit obstructs or delays a Committee inquiry conducted in accordance with its established procedures.

Article 20. Reporting Mechanisms and Whistleblower Protection

20.1. Any member of the University community may report, in good faith, a suspected violation of this Code through any of the following channels: direct supervisor, Human Resources Department, Ethics Committee, Women's Advisory Board, trade union committee, or a dedicated confidential reporting line or mailbox maintained by the University.

20.2. Reports may be submitted anonymously; however, the University encourages complainants to identify themselves where possible, as this facilitates a more thorough investigation, while guaranteeing that identity will be disclosed only to those strictly necessary to conduct the investigation.

20.3. No employee or student shall be dismissed, demoted, disciplined, denied a benefit or opportunity, or otherwise subjected to adverse treatment as a reprisal for reporting, in good faith, a suspected violation of this Code, cooperating with an investigation, or refusing to participate in conduct that would violate the Code.

20.4. A report made maliciously, or with knowledge that it is false, is itself a violation of this Code and may result in disciplinary action against the person who made it, without discouraging good-faith reports that later prove unsubstantiated.

20.5. The University shall keep records of all reports and their outcomes for a period sufficient to identify patterns of misconduct, while limiting access to these records to authorized personnel in accordance with Article 10.

20.6. Where a report reveals a possible criminal offense, the matter shall be referred to the competent state authorities in addition to any internal disciplinary proceedings, without prejudice to the presumption of innocence of the person concerned.

PART TWO — INTERNAL PERSONNEL REGULATIONS

20.7. The University shall periodically evaluate the effectiveness of its reporting channels, including through anonymous staff surveys, and shall make improvements where employees indicate a lack of confidence in the confidentiality or fairness of the process.

Article 21. General Provisions on Employment

21.1. This Part establishes the internal rules governing the employment relationship between the University and its academic, administrative, research, and support staff, and applies together with the Labor Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan, the employment contract of each employee, and any applicable collective agreement.

21.2. Employment relationships at the University are based on the principles of equality, freedom of labor, protection against unjustified dismissal, fair remuneration for work performed, and respect for occupational safety, consistent with the values set out in Part One.

21.3. These regulations apply to all categories of personnel, including rectorate officials, deans, heads of department, professors, associate professors, senior teachers, teachers, researchers, laboratory staff, engineers, librarians, administrative officers, and technical and support staff, subject to any specific provisions applicable to particular categories under separate internal acts.

21.4. The Human Resources Department is responsible for the consistent application of these regulations, for maintaining accurate personnel records, and for advising the Rectorate and heads of structural units on their correct implementation.

Article 22. Recruitment and Selection

22.1. Vacant positions shall be filled through open, transparent, and competitive procedures, including public announcement of vacancies specifying the qualifications, duties, and selection criteria required, except where legislation permits direct appointment for specific categories of positions.

22.2. Selection decisions shall be based on merit, qualifications, relevant experience, and the demonstrated ability to fulfill the duties of the position, evaluated by a selection panel constituted to avoid conflicts of interest as described in Article 8.

22.3. The University guarantees equal treatment of all candidates regardless of gender, ethnicity, religion, age, disability, or family status, in accordance with Article 6, and shall ensure that job advertisements and interview questions do not directly or indirectly discriminate against protected groups.

22.4. Academic appointments requiring specific qualifications, such as professorial or associate professor titles, shall additionally comply with the qualification requirements established by the relevant state authority responsible for higher education and science.

22.5. Candidates have the right to be informed of the outcome of their application within a reasonable period and, upon request, to receive general feedback on the selection decision, without the University being required to disclose confidential deliberations of the selection panel.

22.6. Prior to appointment, candidates shall undergo any background, qualification, and reference verification required by law or internal policy, and shall be informed of, and shall accept, the terms of this Code as a condition of employment.

22.7. Where a selection panel is unable to identify a suitable candidate through open competition, the University may repeat the vacancy announcement or, in exceptional circumstances permitted by law, pursue direct negotiation, provided the decision and its justification are documented and approved by the Rectorate.

Article 23. Employment Contracts and Probation

23.1. Every employee shall be engaged under a written employment contract specifying the position, duties, remuneration, working hours, duration (where fixed-term), and other essential terms, in accordance with the Labor Code.

23.2. A probationary period may be established at the commencement of employment, of a duration not exceeding that permitted by the Labor Code, during which the University shall assess the employee's suitability for the position and the employee shall assess the suitability of the role.

23.3. During probation, the employee enjoys the same rights and protections against discrimination and harassment as any other employee, though the procedure for termination of employment during probation may follow a simplified process to the extent permitted by law.

23.4. Newly hired employees shall receive an orientation covering this Code, workplace safety rules, key institutional policies, and the structure and contacts of the Human Resources Department and Ethics Committee, within the first weeks of employment.

23.5. Any subsequent change to the essential terms of an employment contract, including changes in position, remuneration, or working location, must be agreed in writing between the University and the employee, except where legislation permits a unilateral change subject to advance notice.

23.6. Fixed-term contracts shall specify the objective grounds justifying the fixed duration, and their renewal or non-renewal shall be communicated to the employee within the period established by internal procedure and applicable law.

23.7. A copy of the signed employment contract, together with this Code and the relevant job description, shall be provided to the employee and retained in their personnel file maintained by the Human Resources Department.

Article 24. Working Time and Rest Time

24.1. The standard working time for University employees shall not exceed the maximum weekly hours established by the Labor Code, and shall be distributed according to the schedule applicable to the employee's category of position, whether academic, administrative, or technical.

24.2. Academic staff workload shall be calculated to include teaching, research, administrative, and student supervision duties in accordance with the norms approved by the Academic Council, ensuring a reasonable and equitable distribution of tasks among staff of comparable rank.

24.3. Employees are entitled to daily and weekly rest periods, and to public holidays established by the legislation of the Republic of Uzbekistan, during which they shall not be required to work except in circumstances expressly permitted by law and compensated accordingly.

24.4. Overtime work shall be exceptional, shall require the prior authorization of the relevant head of unit, and shall be compensated in accordance with the Labor Code, whether through additional pay or compensatory rest time, as agreed with the employee.

24.5. Remote or flexible working arrangements may be authorized for specific categories of staff or tasks, subject to approval by the relevant head of department and confirmation that such arrangements do not compromise the quality of teaching, research, or service delivery.

24.6. Attendance shall be recorded through the University's designated timekeeping system, and employees are responsible for the accuracy of their own attendance records; falsification of attendance records constitutes a serious disciplinary offense under Article 32.

24.7. Heads of units shall maintain a fair and transparent schedule for holiday and weekend duty where such duty is required for the continuity of University operations, such as dormitory supervision or facility security, and shall rotate such assignments equitably among eligible staff.

Article 25. Leave Entitlements

25.1. Employees are entitled to annual paid leave in accordance with the Labor Code, the duration of which may vary according to length of service, category of position, and any additional leave entitlements established by internal policy for hazardous, arduous, or otherwise qualifying work.

25.2. Annual leave shall be scheduled in coordination with the head of department to ensure continuity of teaching, research, and administrative functions, with due regard to the employee's preferences and family circumstances where possible.

25.3. Employees are entitled to paid sick leave upon presentation of a medical certificate issued by an authorized medical institution, in accordance with the Labor Code and applicable social insurance rules.

25.4. Female employees are entitled to maternity leave, and both parents are entitled to related family leave, in accordance with the Labor Code and the Law "On Guarantees of Equal Rights and Opportunities for Women and Men"; no employee shall be required to perform work during a period of leave to which they are legally entitled.

25.5. Employees may be granted unpaid leave for personal, educational, or family reasons at the discretion of the Rectorate, having regard to operational requirements and the employee's length of service and prior use of such leave.

25.6. Special leave shall be granted for significant family events (marriage, bereavement, and similar circumstances), academic examinations undertaken by the employee, and other purposes recognized under the Labor Code or internal policy, upon timely notice and supporting documentation where required.

25.7. Records of leave balances shall be maintained by the Human Resources Department and shall be made available to each employee upon request, and unused annual leave shall be carried over or compensated in accordance with the Labor Code.

25.8. An employee returning from an extended period of leave, including maternity or long-term sick leave, shall be reinstated to the same or an equivalent position with no less favorable terms, and shall be given a reasonable period of re-orientation where necessary.

Article 26. Remuneration and Social Guarantees

26.1. Employees shall receive remuneration commensurate with their position, qualifications, experience, and workload, determined in accordance with the salary scales and tariff rates applicable to state higher education institutions and any supplementary payments approved by the Rectorate within its budgetary authority.

26.2. Remuneration shall be paid regularly and in full, without unlawful deduction, and any permissible deductions shall be disclosed to the employee and limited to those authorized by the Labor Code or by the employee's written consent.

26.3. The University shall apply the principle of equal pay for work of equal value, prohibiting any differentiation in remuneration based on gender or other characteristics protected under Article 6, and shall periodically review pay structures to identify and correct unjustified disparities.

26.4. Employees are entitled to social insurance, pension contributions, and other social guarantees provided under the legislation of the Republic of Uzbekistan, and the University shall ensure the timely and accurate remittance of all mandatory contributions on their behalf.

26.5. The University may establish additional incentive payments, bonuses, or awards for outstanding teaching, research, administrative service, or contribution to the University's reputation, allocated according to transparent and objective criteria approved by the Rectorate.

26.6. Employees temporarily unable to work due to illness, injury, or other circumstances recognized by law shall receive the benefits to which they are entitled under the applicable social insurance scheme, processed by the Human Resources Department without undue delay.

26.7. Any dispute concerning the calculation or payment of remuneration shall be addressed in the first instance to the Human Resources Department and, if unresolved, may be pursued through the grievance procedure in Article 33 or before the competent court.

Article 27. Financial Integrity and Use of Budgetary Funds

27.1. Employees responsible for the preparation, approval, or execution of the University's budget, including heads of structural units and financial officers, must manage public and institutional funds honestly, prudently, and strictly in accordance with their designated purpose.

27.2. All financial transactions, including procurement, contracting, travel expenses, and research grant expenditures, must be documented accurately and completely, and must be available for internal and external audit in accordance with applicable legislation.

27.3. Employees must not use University funds, grants, or budgetary allocations for personal benefit, for purposes other than those approved, or in a manner that circumvents applicable procurement or financial control procedures.

27.4. Employees who manage externally funded research grants or projects must comply with the financial reporting requirements of the funding body in addition to internal University financial rules, and must promptly disclose any actual or potential misuse of grant funds to the relevant financial control unit and the Ethics Committee.

27.5. The University's internal audit and financial control units shall operate independently in verifying compliance with this Article, and their findings shall be reported to the Rectorate and, where required by law, to the competent state authorities.

27.6. Any employee who suspects financial misconduct, including misappropriation of funds or falsification of financial records, may report the matter through the channels described in Article 20, and shall be protected from retaliation on the same basis as any other good-faith report under this Code.

Article 28. Performance Evaluation and Career Development

28.1. Employee performance shall be evaluated periodically against clear, relevant, and previously communicated criteria appropriate to the employee's category of position, including, for academic staff, teaching quality, research output, and service to the University.

28.2. Performance evaluations shall be conducted by the immediate supervisor or an appropriate evaluation committee, shall involve the employee's own input and self-assessment, and shall be documented and communicated to the employee, who has the right to comment on or contest the evaluation through the grievance procedure in Article 33.

28.3. The University shall provide access to professional development opportunities, including training, conferences, and further qualification programs, on a fair basis that reflects institutional priorities and individual development needs, without discrimination on grounds prohibited under Article 6.

28.4. Promotion to higher academic titles, administrative positions, or salary grades shall be based on demonstrated performance, qualifications, and adherence to this Code, assessed through transparent procedures established by the Academic Council or the Rectorate as applicable.

28.5. Employees who receive an unsatisfactory performance evaluation shall be informed of the specific shortcomings identified and shall be given a reasonable opportunity, including guidance and support where appropriate, to improve their performance before further consequences are considered.

28.6. Records of performance evaluations shall be maintained confidentially in the employee's personnel file and shall be accessible to the employee concerned and to authorized personnel involved in subsequent employment decisions.

28.7. Line managers shall receive guidance and, where necessary, training on conducting fair and constructive performance evaluations, to reduce the risk of inconsistent or biased assessment across different structural units.

Article 29. Training and Professional Development

29.1. The University is committed to the continuous professional development of all categories of staff, recognizing that well-trained personnel are essential to the quality of teaching, research, and administration.

29.2. Newly appointed heads of structural units shall receive training on their responsibilities under this Code, including recruitment, performance evaluation, disciplinary procedure, and the prevention of discrimination and harassment, within a reasonable period after their appointment.

29.3. All employees shall receive periodic refresher training on this Code, including updates concerning anti-corruption, equal opportunity, data protection, and occupational safety, organized by the Human Resources Department in coordination with the Ethics Committee and relevant specialized units.

29.4. The University shall allocate resources, within its budgetary capacity, to support academic staff participation in advanced qualification courses, doctoral studies, research stays, and professional certification relevant to their fields, allocated according to transparent criteria that reflect institutional needs and individual merit.

29.5. Participation in training funded or organized by the University may be subject to a reasonable service commitment period, to be specified in a separate agreement with the employee, consistent with the Labor Code and applicable internal policy.

29.6. Records of training completed by each employee shall be maintained by the Human Resources Department and taken into account, together with performance evaluations under Article 28, in decisions concerning promotion and career development.

Article 30. Occupational Health and Safety

30.1. The University shall provide and maintain a safe and healthy working and learning environment, in compliance with applicable occupational health and safety legislation, including safe premises, equipment, and laboratory conditions.

30.2. Employees shall receive appropriate training on occupational safety, fire prevention, and emergency procedures relevant to their duties, particularly those working in laboratories, workshops, or other environments involving specific hazards.

30.3. Employees are obliged to comply with safety instructions, to use protective equipment provided, and to report immediately any workplace hazard, accident, or near-miss to their supervisor and the relevant safety officer.

30.4. The University shall investigate all reported workplace accidents and near-misses, take corrective measures to prevent recurrence, and provide the support required by law to any employee who suffers a work-related injury or illness.

30.5. The University shall take reasonable measures to accommodate employees with disabilities or health conditions, adjusting workstations, duties, or schedules where feasible and consistent with the requirements of the position and the principles set out in Article 6.

30.6. Smoking, the consumption of alcohol, and the use of prohibited substances are not permitted on University premises during working hours, except in designated areas where legally permitted, and violations may result in disciplinary action under Article 32.

30.7. Female employees who are pregnant or have recently given birth, and employees with recognized disabilities, shall be provided with any additional protective measures required by law, including restrictions on hazardous work and adjusted duties, in coordination with the Women's Advisory Board and the relevant medical authority.

Article 31. Labor Discipline and Internal Order Rules

31.1. Employees are required to perform their duties conscientiously, to comply with their job descriptions and lawful instructions of their supervisors, to observe the working hours established for their position, and to treat colleagues, students, and visitors with courtesy.

31.2. Employees shall arrive punctually, shall not leave their workplace during working hours without proper authorization, and shall use working time exclusively for the performance of assigned duties, subject to reasonable rest breaks provided by internal schedule.

31.3. Employees shall maintain the cleanliness and order of their workplace, use University resources economically and responsibly, and comply with dress and appearance standards appropriate to an academic institution, as further specified by internal instruction where applicable.

31.4. Unauthorized absence from work, repeated lateness, refusal to perform lawfully assigned duties, and other breaches of labor discipline shall be documented by the relevant supervisor and may give rise to disciplinary measures under Article 32.

31.5. Heads of structural units are responsible for enforcing labor discipline within their units fairly and consistently, for maintaining accurate records of attendance and performance, and for escalating serious or repeated violations to the Human Resources Department.

31.6. Internal order rules shall be displayed or made accessible in each structural unit, and any additional unit-specific rules adopted by a department must be consistent with this Code and approved by the relevant vice-rector.

31.7. Heads of units shall apply these internal order rules consistently to employees of all ranks, including senior academic and administrative staff, and shall themselves be subject to the same standards of punctuality, diligence, and respect for colleagues required of those they supervise.

Article 32. Disciplinary Liability and Procedure

32.1. An employee who fails to perform or improperly performs the duties assigned by their employment contract, job description, or this Code may be subject to disciplinary liability in accordance with the Labor Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan.

32.2. Disciplinary sanctions available to the University include, in order of increasing severity: a verbal or written reminder; a formal reprimand recorded in the employee's personnel file; a severe reprimand; and termination of employment on the grounds established by the Labor Code for serious or repeated misconduct.

32.3. Prior to imposing any disciplinary sanction beyond a verbal reminder, the University shall request a written explanation from the employee concerning the alleged violation, and the employee shall be given a reasonable opportunity to present their account of events and any supporting evidence.

32.4. The severity of a disciplinary sanction shall be proportionate to the gravity of the violation, the circumstances in which it occurred, the employee's prior record, and any mitigating or aggravating factors, and shall be determined only after due consideration of the explanation provided by the employee.

32.5. A disciplinary sanction shall be documented in an order issued by the Rector or an authorized official, stating the grounds for the sanction, and shall be communicated to the employee, who has the right to appeal the sanction through the grievance procedure in Article 33 or before a competent court, in accordance with the Labor Code.

32.6. A disciplinary sanction shall not be imposed later than the period established by the Labor Code from the date the violation was discovered, excluding periods of the employee's illness or leave, and in no case later than the maximum period established by law from the date the violation occurred.

32.7. A disciplinary sanction shall be considered lifted, and shall not be referred to as grounds for a subsequent, more severe sanction, after the period established by the Labor Code has elapsed without a new violation, or earlier by decision of the Rector on account of exemplary conduct.

32.8. An employee against whom disciplinary proceedings are initiated has the right to be assisted by a representative of the trade union committee or a colleague of their choosing during the disciplinary process, without this right delaying the process beyond the time limits established by the Labor Code.

Article 33. Grievance and Dispute Resolution

33.1. Any employee who disagrees with a decision affecting their employment — including a performance evaluation, disciplinary sanction, denial of leave, or other administrative decision — may submit a written grievance to the Human Resources Department within a reasonable period from the date the decision was communicated.

33.2. The Human Resources Department shall acknowledge receipt of the grievance, conduct or coordinate an impartial review, which may include consultation with the Ethics Committee where the grievance concerns conduct addressed in Part One, and provide a reasoned written response within a reasonable period.

33.3. Where the grievance is not resolved to the employee's satisfaction, the employee may escalate the matter to the Rector or an authorized vice-rector for final internal review, without prejudice to the employee's right to pursue the matter before the labor dispute commission or a competent court in accordance with the Labor Code.

33.4. The trade union committee, where the employee is a member, shall be entitled to participate in the grievance process at the employee's request, in accordance with legislation on trade unions and collective labor rights.

33.5. The University shall ensure that no employee suffers adverse consequences for having raised a grievance in good faith, consistent with the whistleblower protections established in Article 20.

33.6. Where a grievance concerns a matter also being reviewed under Articles 19 and 20, the University shall coordinate the two processes to avoid duplication while ensuring that the employee's procedural rights under both processes are fully respected.

Article 34. Termination of Employment

34.1. Employment may be terminated on any ground recognized by the Labor Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan, including by mutual agreement of the parties, upon expiry of a fixed-term contract, at the initiative of the employee, at the initiative of the University for cause, or due to circumstances beyond the control of either party.

34.2. An employee wishing to resign shall provide written notice to the Human Resources Department within the period established by the Labor Code, and the University shall process the resignation, including final settlement of remuneration and accrued leave, within the period required by law.

34.3. Termination at the initiative of the University shall be based only on the grounds established by the Labor Code, such as redundancy, repeated or serious violation of labor discipline, established incapacity to perform the duties of the position, or a serious violation of this Code, including corruption, harassment, or academic fraud established through the procedures in Articles 19, 16, and 26.

34.4. Prior to termination for cause, the University shall follow the disciplinary procedure set out in Article 32, and, where termination is based on redundancy, shall comply with the notice periods, consultation requirements, and severance entitlements established by the Labor Code.

34.5. Certain categories of employees, including pregnant employees and employees on parental leave, enjoy special protection against termination under the Labor Code and the Law "On Guarantees of Equal Rights and Opportunities for Women and Men", and the University shall not terminate the employment of such employees except on grounds expressly permitted by law.

34.6. Upon termination of employment for any reason, the University shall issue the employee's work record book and any other document required by law, settle all outstanding remuneration and entitlements, and remind the employee of continuing obligations under Article 10 regarding confidentiality.

34.7. An employee who considers their dismissal unlawful may challenge it through the grievance procedure in Article 33 or directly before the competent court, in accordance with the time limits and procedures established by the Labor Code.

34.8. Exit interviews shall be offered to departing employees to gather feedback on their employment experience, and information gathered through such interviews shall be used, in aggregate and anonymized form, to improve the University's personnel practices.

Article 35. Processing of Personal Data

35.1. The University collects, stores, and processes personal data of employees strictly for purposes connected with the employment relationship, including recruitment, payroll, social insurance, performance management, and compliance with legal obligations, in accordance with the Law "On Personal Data".

35.2. Employees shall be informed, at the time personal data is collected, of the purposes of processing, the categories of data collected, and their rights to access, correct, and, where legally permissible, request deletion of their personal data.

35.3. Access to employee personal data files shall be restricted to authorized Human Resources personnel and, where relevant to a specific matter, to the employee's direct supervisor, the Ethics Committee, or the competent state authority, and shall not be disclosed to third parties without the employee's consent except as required by law.

35.4. The University shall implement appropriate technical and organizational measures to protect personal data against unauthorized access, alteration, disclosure, or destruction, and shall promptly notify affected employees and, where required, the competent authority in the event of a significant data breach.

35.5. Personal data of former employees shall be retained only for the period required by law or for the legitimate defense of the University's rights, after which it shall be securely archived or destroyed in accordance with internal records management procedures.

35.6. Employees have the right to request a copy of the personal data held about them by the University and to request correction of inaccurate data, and the Human Resources Department shall respond to such requests within a reasonable period in accordance with the Law "On Personal Data".

Article 36. Final Provisions

36.1. This Code enters into force upon its approval by the Academic Council and the issuance of a corresponding order by the Rector, and supersedes any previous internal code of ethics or personnel regulation inconsistent with its provisions.

36.2. This Code shall be reviewed not less than once every three years, or earlier where required by changes in legislation, institutional restructuring, or recommendations of the Ethics Committee, following consultation with staff and student representatives.

36.3. Proposals to amend this Code may be submitted by any structural unit, the trade union committee, the Women's Advisory Board, the Ethics Committee, or a group of employees, for consideration by the Academic Council.

36.4. Heads of all structural units are responsible for ensuring that employees under their supervision are familiar with this Code, and the Human Resources Department shall maintain a signed acknowledgment of receipt of the Code from each employee in their personnel file.

36.5. This Code is drawn up in a manner consistent with the Constitution and laws of the Republic of Uzbekistan; should any future amendment to national legislation conflict with a specific provision of this Code, the legislative provision shall apply automatically pending formal amendment of the Code.

36.6. This Code shall be published in full on the University's official website and made available in hard copy at the Human Resources Department and the office of each dean, so that any member of the University community may consult it at any time.
